The image shows two pages of a handwritten ledger or notebook. The pages are filled with dense, cursive handwriting in dark ink. The left page has a vertical margin on the right side, and the right page has a vertical margin on the left side. The handwriting is somewhat slanted and difficult to decipher due to the cursive style and the angle of the photograph.

Experiments in a Gulf War of 1991-1992

This image shows a page from a handwritten ledger. The page contains approximately 15 rows of entries. Each row typically consists of a date or time written in Chinese characters, followed by a numerical value, and then a description or unit also in Chinese characters. The handwriting is in black ink on aged, slightly yellowed paper. The entries are organized in a structured, tabular format, typical of traditional Chinese account books.
